LIFESTYLE DIVISION CONSUMER PERSONA

TARGET PERSONA- HARLEY-DAVIDSON

THE H-D MENS CONSUMER: MEET MIKE

Mike age 48 is a small business owner, married with two teenagers. He owns a motorcycle and rides most weekends. He attends at least one rally per year and regularly visits his local dealership. Riding is his reset button — his way to unplug from responsibility and reconnect with himself and his riding community.

Harley isn't a purchase for him. It's part of who he is.

- Will pay a premium if product is justified by durability or technology
- Responds to in-store displays that feel strong, masculine, and clean
- Influenced by staff recommendations
- Often purchases add-ons when emotionally engaged

TARGET PERSONA- HARLEY-DAVIDSON

THE H-D FEMALE CONSUMER: MEET JESS

Jess is 35, a marketing manager living just outside the city. Her weekdays are packed with meetings, deadlines, and constant noise—but the moment Friday hits, everything shifts.

She throws a leather jacket over her shoulders, grabs her helmet, and walks toward her Harley-Davidson. That first engine start isn't just a sound—it's a release.

Riding is her reset.
